

FINAL PRESS RELEASE OF THE THIRD NATIONAL (UN)CONFERENCE FOR SCHOOL EDUCATORS EDCAMP UKRAINE 2017

On 29 and 30 April 2017, the Third National (Un)conference EdCamp Ukraine took place in Kharkiv. 716 teachers from 25 regions of Ukraine, the Minister of Education and Science of Ukraine Liliya Hrynevych and 135 international practitioners from 20 countries participated in the (un)conference. The mainstream theme of the event was the concept of the New Ukrainian School, a plan of the Ministry how to reform the secondary school, as well as advanced methods of teaching and professional development including public lessons, after which children assessed the teachers' work. Throughout the (un)conference, 220 different sessions: lectures, discussions, workshops and seminars, with total duration 160 hours, were held. After EdCamp Ukraine 2017, a "long tail" effect will start working: the attendees of EdCamp Ukraine will host their mini-EdCamps for the communities of their towns and villages, disseminating the idea of active and responsible teaching all over the country.

Both the organizers and the participants of EdCamp Ukraine 2017 call themselves 'rarae aves'. This time, there were 716 of them from all over Ukraine. More of them, colleagues, experts, managers, came from other countries. The community was greeted via specially recorded videos by Sir Ken Robinson, an international advisor on education, and Hadley Ferguson, Executive Director at The Edcamp Foundation. At the opening and after that, in TEDx format the following teachers-practitioners spoke to the colleagues:

- an English teacher, Marija Petreska (Macedonia),
- a creator of Empathy and Integral Thinking Course, Irena Pranskeviciute (Lithuania),
- a scientist for CERN, European Organization for Nuclear Research (CERN), Giovanni Porcellana (Switzerland),
- a Freelance Education Expert, Lorenzo Newman (Italy),
- a Project Manager for Inspire Your Teacher, Daniela Venâncio (Portugal).

In their speeches and discussions, one could hear the same idea – responsible teachers from different countries have the same values: education, dignity, freedom, peace. Happy Ukraine (a social initiative) identified the teachers' values at the (un)conference and concluded that the most important things for them are love, freedom, life, family, health. In addition to that, Ukrainian responsible teachers have a mainstream topic for talks: what will the New Ukrainian School be like?

The participants of the (un)conference could hear about that from the Minister of Education and Science of Ukraine Liliya Hrynevych who also took part in EdCamp Ukraine 2017. "The mission of education is to discover the world. As the world is changing very fast, the school should also change, and we should change," she said to the colleagues. "I would like all of us become those people who would be able to lead other educators. Those, who don't believe that something will change. Those, who don't want to change themselves, but they will have to do it in the new Ukrainian school."

EdCamp Ukraine 2017 was supported by Maryna Poroshenko. The First Lady pays special attention to creating inclusive educational environment in Ukraine that should become a guarantee of changing the attitude towards disabled people: “We should realize that the ability to accept people who aren’t like us is an important index of the consciousness level of a nation. I am sure that thanks to teachers’ empathy and our common efforts Ukrainian children with special educational needs will get a real chance to live full social life.”

Inclusive education was a topic of many sessions at EdCamp Ukraine 2017. Marina Krisov (Israel), an international consultant on inclusive education problems, in particular delivered her session about it.

The reform of education was not just discussed as the participants lived two days in the New Ukrainian school learning 10 competences and 9 components of its formula, measuring confidence in it with the help of the ‘reformometer’. They formed the programme on their own, chose sessions out of 220 ones to improve their qualification, became speakers, took part in the educational quests, in holding and discussing public lessons. The 9th-grade class of pupils, who participated in the public lessons and gave their feedback, consisted of 15 schoolchildren who came from Stanytsya Luhanska region. They came to EdCamp Ukraine 2017 due to Serhiy Zhadan Charitable Foundation.

The schoolchildren had their specially created programme from the hosts: they worked on creating large LEGO-constructions, twisted non-discrimination wheel, learned eco saving practices, improved safe cycling, generated social projects, went on tours around Kharkiv. Both schoolchildren and their teachers studied professions of the future during visiting sessions and on the doors to the locations.

“Preparing children for the future life but not for the exams is the mission that ‘rarae aves’ from EdCamp Ukraine carry out. Here they think freely, exchange their practical experience, create horizontal connections, ask questions to authority representatives,” tells the Head of EdCamp Ukraine organizational committee, Oleksandr Elkin. “So, our mission is to create and maintain the movement of ‘rarae aves’, as the main things will happen after the (un)conference.”

At EdCamp Ukraine 2017, the national stage of the Global Teachers Prize in Ukraine started due to the efforts of Public Association “Osvitoriya”. This award is also called “Teachers’ Oscar”. Last year Hanna Dudych, an English teacher from Kropyvnytskyi, became one of 50 finalists of the world stage of the Global Teachers Prize. On EdCamp Ukraine 2017 she had a Skype session and everyone could ask her about the contest, the national stage of which will take place in Ukraine for the first time.

One of the so called ‘long tail’ effects will be the continuation of activities after the very event. It will include creating groups of active teachers in regions who will organize their local (un)conferences. Throughout the 2016-2017 school year, 24 mini-EdCamp were hosted. Next year, there will be much more as the organizers assure.

“EdCamp in Ukraine and all across the world are based on the idea of self-directed learning, when people getting together decide for themselves what they want to find out and to learn from each other in the excitement of collaboration. I think it’s already a powerful model and it’s spreading because it’s powerful,” says Sir Ken Robinson. “But it’s messaging too, that what works for teachers works for kids. People like to learn from each other. They like to collaborate. Learning is a natural process which is driven by curiosity, by learning from other people, by investigating new horizons, by crossing boundaries. That’s how it works. I have been campaigning for very long time in my own work for forms of educational practice that represent those principles.”

The importance of everything that is happening in Ukraine was emphasized by Philippe Greier, an educator from Brazil: “Sometimes teachers of one country think that the most important things in pedagogy happen abroad. This is not true as in every country there are their own ideas, their own breakthroughs. Ukrainian educators should more learn from each other, exchange their ideas, support their colleagues.”

Creating and supporting responsible teachers and teaching is the main goal of EdCamp Ukraine organizers for the next year. The time between national (un)conferences will be filled with work, including educational expeditions to different countries in search for successful pedagogic cases (Tours with EdMandro), creating an alternative centre for professional development of teachers (Future Classroom Lab), designing a platform for holding and discussing public lessons (Aquarium), organizing 60 (un)conferences in regions. And, of course, preparing for the Fourth national (un) conference EdCamp Ukraine 2018.

“This job is not less important, it’s probably even more important than the annual (un)conference. At the events we exchange experiences and ideas, but real changes happen afterwards, in schools,” tells Oleksandr Elkin. “That’s why we launched the fundraising campaign to provide the current work of the Ukrainian EdCamp team. Those, who support our work, among them not only educators, but all of them Ukrainians, who support our ideas and our vision of the future of new Ukrainian school, have an opportunity to support our team financially, becoming a member of it. In this way, we will change the Ukrainian school altogether.
